They were let in, didn't you see the videos of then opening the doors for them and the protestors saying "oh yeah, acab" to the cops and everyone laughing? They let that happen knowing we wouldn't burn it down, and even if we did they'd have some bad media to play on loop for the next decade. It was a win win for the deep state, I'm not even separating them anymore they're all in it together

Give it a few days.

This is good advice. It needs to marinate.

I was on the Capitol steps, where I wasn't supposed to be, and it was a party celebrating liberty and freedom and many people said out loud they felt it was long overdue. Those people are telling their stories, and they (and I) are absorbing the fact that we were called terrorists. I'm still unpacking it.

More and more people will wake up to exactly what happened and what is going on and a righteous anger will spread.

Thank you, I really appreciate that.

I felt pretty bad when I got back to my room last night and found out that somebody was killed and that congress used us as an excuse to confirm Biden. Talking with patriots in the airport this morning and interacting with my pedes has helped me unpack it today.

I'm fired up.

I'm sure that completely sucks and definitely understand how you'd feel that way. Just know that they didn't have the numbers to make a difference even if they were sincere, which we know they weren't. You didn't prevent anything.

In fact, what you all did was amazing because it took the attention off the proceedings, which were made to look legitimate and fair as orderly debates proceeded toward their inevitable end. Then the capitol breach sent the politicians scattering, sent them into hiding which was terrible optics I think, and I don't think anyone was interested in the vote after that. You guys changed the narrative entirely, and now all anyone can talk about is the rally, Trump and the number of supporters who showed up and were passionate. This is a GOOD thing. Even Rush Limbaugh agrees with you!

It's no longer the 18th century, and a revolution today would be vastly different than a revolution then. Now, we would need much more than that. How do we get there, when Scavino says Trump, as of last night, will peacefully transfer to Biden presidency on the 20th. Mainstream Media is going to fuck us the next four years while there is a supermajority in Congress.

I was on the Capitol steps yesterday and today at the airport I saw the chyron that labeled me a domestic terrorist who attempted an insurrection.

I said "Hey, motherfuckers, if that had been an insurrection, it would have succeeded!"

We were there standing up for our first amendment right and our constitutional right to address our representatives. It was American AF.

Now I'm a terrorist? Fuck you, game on.

75 million voted for Trump. Did you see DC yesterday? All the election rallies? It does exist. It's just not broadcasted to you from the media. They make it confusing, I get it. however, a lot of people see the world the same way as you and me.

= JimmyJam -1 points 7 days ago +1 / -2

i get that - but i think we can have that 75M and another 30M+ more. Also, that 75M is not die hard 75M, there is a good portion that can be offended by the media narrative and can be lost. I am not ashamed of what happened, just want to make sure that people need to understand optics do matter and whatever MAGA people do needs to be strategic. I also think Trump could have communicated much better yesterday. It's important that he leaves office in a position of strength - not in a media blackout with his entire staff running for the hills. I think that matters.

permalink parent save report block reply

= Djt2029 3 points 7 days ago +3 / -0

I do believe Trump could've communicated better. I was there. A lot were confused by his speech. You cannot say it will be wild and present nothing new.

As far as optics, yes I get your point, but my point is the optics game when defined by how the MSM reports is rigged. It literally would not matter what you do. This would've been barely covered like the other ones if nothing occurred.

I do believe as well that Trump, if he ends up leaving, needs to leave in a better position than this.

That seige was the proudest moment of my entire life to be an American. There were so many differences of opinion as to what to do at every turn of events and debate was had and decided on. Ive never seen people working together so well. Anytime someone started to bicker someone else would instantaneously put a stop to it. People were washing each others eyes out, letting strangers rub their gross tear gas snot faces all over their clothes, hell I even saw Boomers charging into the breach like Viking Berserkers which was surprising to say the least.

We did not have any leadership there. Just random Patriots. All we were told by the Pres was to go to the Captial. Once there we were completely on our own. That isnt to say we didnt organize ourselves and have a common driver, but to read all this BS being thrown out about it especially from "conservatives" is really sad.

I was on the south side of the west side of the capital initially, and then once they took the north wing the police fell back and I ended up at the entrance to the building at that little stage they had partially set up (not sure where that leads). Anyway, initially when we were down there we were just talking to the police officers and it was mostly chill. This one boomer was doing the typical boomer rant to a group of officers in front of him (you know the one where you agree with him in spirit but are cringing so hard based on his style that you want to die), and this one cop decided to just walk up and soak his face in pepper spray. Completely inappropriate, and likely criminal behavior. Instead of collapsing like I expected, this boomer channeled a Conan level of barbarian patriotic rage and like ripped the police metal fence cordon to pieces and caused them all to fall back. It was spectacular and fully justified.

The second great boomer act I saw, was when we were all at the double doors stuck in a meat pile vs Police shield wall (nobody could do anything because their were just so many Patriots behind us thinking they were going in and couldnt see do to all the tear gas). The police were just screaming at us to back off and we were screaming that we couldnt, and that we wernt going to hurt the police, basically just chill out please. Most of the police understood, and we were helping each other get up, or make space when little dudes or ladies were getting crushed. Some of the police, however, were really getting off on it and doing everything they could to break the peace, by getting baton shots in, or tear gas/pepper spray, which was especially retarded because at this point 90% of the officers did not have masks on so they were getting wrecked by it, and we were actually having to help them out more than they helped us. So this boomer works his way up there and starts singling these guys out and demanding they hit him. So he starts getting hit, and his face is getting busted, and he just keeps getting back up and saying hit me, spray me, come on do it. He never once hit back. It was really badass. Dude looked like a retired accountant, not some crazy boomer like you would expect.

the mood the entire day was super high energy, super peaceful, but also pissed off. I mean I didnt see anyone get rough with a police officer until they killed a woman in front of us and knocked some other dude out cold. Then people started throwing stuff at them and hitting their shields with the batons they stole from the police. Even though at that point with elevated levels of emotion, people were still scolding each other and generally keeping everyone in check.

I was initially right at the entrance doors, but fell back a bit because I was getting maced and hit to much and needed a breather. There was a group behind me that busted out a window to get into one of the rooms. This move had a mixed reception with the crowd, but I believe there was unanimous agreement that our goal was to get into the building and let our voices be heard, and 99% of the people were steadfast refusing to so much as touch a police officer, unless it was to help them up. The group that did go in was told through the door that they would be charged with terrorism, so that sobered them up a bit and they just barricaded the door and basically chilled out in there to stay out of the tear gas which was getting more heavy at this point.

Eventually at some point, a group of green fatigued operator looking dudes poured out pointing rifles at everyone and dropping an ungodly amount of tear gas and shooting pepper balls indiscriminately from above. This dispersed us pretty quick and it was over at that point. To answer your question though the mood was very shell shocked.

Same for me. It was awesome. Everyone was walking around with huge grins. Singing the national anthem and God Bless America, American flags in every direction. It was epic and American AF.

The "siege"? Do you idiots not know what that word means?

You broke in pretty fast but not fast enough to prevent everyone important from escaping, and within three hours they had cleared you all out. And now it's over.

That was not a fucking siege. So I'm not sure how either side was performing a siege.

I actually think it's more of an issue that they GROSSLY underestimated the turnout.

After 2 months of demoralization they probably taught that Trump's rally would end up being a massive L for him with only a handful of people showing up, easily contained by a few dozen officers.

Instead, they showed up with so many that if they would've tried to stop them at the outer barrier, the sheer number would've simply allowed 80% of the protestors to pass by ignoring their existence altogether

This is a good point. Look at what the DC police do when Patriot Front does one of their surprise marches: The police essentially perform escort duty for the march to the point of keeping Antifa away from the march. It's their default tactic when caught by surprise.

It was refreshing to see Patriots finally stand up and do something. I really didn't think anything like that would happen. It almost feels like a dream.

I thank all Pedes who were there that day.

Fuck whatever the Left and the media are saying about yesterday. We didn't care what they had to say before, so there's no reason to start now. We know we didn't go in there with the intent on causing millions in damages, or physical harm to the innocent. We went in because we felt wrong by our representatives, and betrayed.

They need to nip this in the bud ASAP which is why they've flipped to "We love the government shooting unarmed females. Riots are bad" etc

The people (frankly it's not left and right anymore) just showed a willingness to band together and revolt against the ruling class (aka who they worship) and they watched as their powerful "gods" had to scurry off like rats.

Their mission now will be destroying that spirit.

The Secret Service does not let any rando enter a Trump rally by just holding their arms up to show they're not carrying anything.

The Initial Breaches of the Capital Building were Planed by the Democrats with their Antifa and BLM partners... Meaning those that Broke the windows and went through and those that 1st fought through the barriers and doors! The Capitol & DC Police just pulled back at multiple stages... FACTs !!!

The MAGA / Trump people then went in for the tour of the building! Should they have taken the tour and protest inside? NO... but they didn't break or steal anything once inside!

There were NO Riots in DC at all! I have no idea what the Fucking Media doing by spewing the Riot garbage! Show the Businesses Burned, Store windows broken and looting... ZERO of that!

Yeah but it was also dumb because it derailed the entire day and the whole reason people came out was to support the objections and then all the debates ended up happening at 1am so nobody was even awake.
